

Changing jobs? Be your own super boss.

In the last 3 years, 54%¹ of Australians stayed with their current super fund when starting a new job.

When you start a new job you choose where your salary goes and know when it's paid. So why leave the choice of your super up to your employer?

It's your money after all, so take control.

New job checklist

-  Get yourself the latest haircut
-  Complete a LinkedIn search of your colleagues
-  Scope out nearest café
-  Give your employer your bank account AND super fund details²

How to take Essential Super to a new job (it's SUPER easy)

- 1 Log on to the CommBank app
- 2 Select your Essential Super account
- 3 Tap 'Share account details with employer'
- 4 Email your personalised form to yourself or direct to your employer – it has all the details your employer needs to start paying your super.

You can also find your personalised form in NetBank. Simply select your Essential Super account and click 'Super Choice form'.

² It's important to decide what's happening with your super. If eligible for choice, you should choose a super fund that's right for you, and consider getting professional advice to help you understand the features of alternative funds. If you don't make a choice, your super will go into the fund selected by your employer.
